INDIA and Argentina share a close relationship. It seems that the two countries are further going to strengthen this association between the two countries.

In the month of February, India opened a new Embassy office in Argentina. This new office of the Indian Embassy in Argentina was opened in Buenos Aires in the second week of February. The Foreign Minister of Argentina, Jorge Enrique Taiana and the Minister of State for External Affairs of India jointly inaugurated this new office of the Indian Embassy in Argentina on February 7, 2008. Media reports inform that the disciples of Myrta Barwie performed Indian classical dance on the occasion. A reception followed the inauguration.

Now the Indian Embassy in Argentina has moved to the 19th floor of Torre Madero, 942, Avenida Eduardo Madero. Phone, fax and email addresses will remain the same. Sources inform that the new office has a large space, fantastic view of the River Plata and a Business Centre.

On this occasion the Foreign Minister of Argentina, Jorge Enrique Taiana underlined the growing importance of India in Argentina's export.

On this occasion the Foreign Minister of Argentina also announced that the new Consulate is going to be opened by Argentina in Mumbai within the coming few weeks.

Fernando Ras has been nominated as the first Consul General in Mumbai. He has an experience in Economic Diplomacy. He was Director General of Export promotion in the Foreign Ministry in the last three years and had visited India with an Argentine business delegation in July 2006. Mr. Ras was scheduled to reach Mumbai to open the consulate in February 2008.

The brief for imprint is to be a media for the Art and Practice of diplomacy. It circulates within the Indian Diplomatic community globally. Imprint shall report the articles of Indian diplomats, as also the diplomatic activity in India of foreign diplomats.

The Address of the President of Republic of Kazakhstan Nursultan Nazarbayev to the Nation

THE annual Address of President Nursultan Nazarbayev to the people of Kazakhstan "The growth of welfare of the citizens of Kazakhstan is the main goal of the state's policy" is a logical continuation of the Addresses of 2006 and 2007, which were devoted to Kazakhstan's strategy of joining the ranks of the world's 50 most competitive nations and modernization of society, as well as innovative development of economy.

The President specifically outlined the necessity for consistent modernization and ensuring Kazakhstan's stable economic growth. On this very basis the principle goal of preserving the pace of social development and growth of citizens' prosperity is planned to be achieved.

Speaking on "Consistent modernization and maintenance of stable economic growth" President Nazarbayev pointed out key priorities of economic policy. Namely, the Government of Kazakhstan is set to stimulate domestic investment resources with growing role of state holdings, development institutions and social-business corporations. Priority measures should comprise of:

- Consistent strengthening of State authority in strategically important branches of economy to consolidate Kazakhstan's position as an influential and responsible player in global energy markets, as well as to enter international market with value added goods;
- speedy infrastructural development of economy's main sectors, such as electricity generation and transportation system. With this in mind the Head of State instructed to start implementation of the largest transportation project in Kazakhstan "Transcontinental corridor Western Europe – Western China";
- development of non-extractive

sector through the implementation of the "30 corporate leaders" program*.

The priorities of macroeconomic policy are focused on establishing an efficient response mechanism to financial instability threats and enhancing the international markets' confidence in Kazakhstan's economy. Structural reforms in financial system are to be continued to raise its competitiveness and stability, further improve management of systemic risks both in private and state sectors, as well as elaborate a quick response measures in case of force-major situations.

President noted that inflow of foreign capital into the banking sector is regarded as a vote of confidence in Kazakhstan, a source of financial support and best international practices of banking services.

On the agenda is to bring the tax system in line with the goals of the new stage of Kazakhstan development, thereby promoting modernization and diversification of Kazakhstan's economy, elimination of "shadow business". New Tax Code must become the law of direct action and prescribe the reduction of tax burden for non-extractive industries, especially for small and medium sized enterprises, at the expense of greater economic return from extractive sector.

The Address necessitates further improvement of Kazakhstan's model of political and state functioning through combining universally accepted mechanisms of democracy development and traditions of Kazakhstan society, with a view of maintaining long term stability, peace and harmony.

Increased effectiveness of public administration, further administrative reform, systemic measures against criminality and corruption are set to be accomplished within the framework of political modernization.

The President also noted the importance of comprehensive assistance to entrepreneurship, freeing it from a burden of administrative pressure and illegal interference.

According to "Increasing Kazakhstan population's prosperity" task, a provision of social welfare will remain amongst the most important targets. Healthcare and education are named nationwide priorities and they will be developed by attracting private capital as a part of corporate social responsibility.

The forth theme of the Address is devoted to the consolidation of international authority, regional stability and international security. It is underlined that the basic priorities of Kazakhstan foreign policy remain invariable.

Kazakhstan will continue to develop economic and political cooperation with Russia, China and the countries of Central Asia, thus creating a firm basis for stability, open dialogue and interaction in the region. With the purpose of strengthening security in Central Asia, constructive cooperation with the United States, the European Union and NATO will be expanded.

Due to the chairmanship of the Republic of Kazakhstan in the OSCE in 2010, a special program "Path to Europe" has been initiated by President Nazarbayev. It is to promote the development of economic cooperation, attract edge cut technologies and modern management practices, further legislation reform.

*In his Address to the Nation – 2007 President N.Nazarbaev called for close interaction of government with private structures through the "30 corporate leaders of Kazakhstan" Programme to further improve the country's competitive edge and regional role by implementing "breakthrough" projects in priority sectors of Kazakhstan's economy.

French Embassy supports photo exhibition

A PRESS Release issued by the French Embassy states that at present IPN'08 is going on in India. IPN'08 is a platform for photography in India. It is a federative initiative promoting photography in India and encouraging new initiatives in this field throughout the year and the country. Born from the enthusiasm of various Indian and European partners, IPN'08 is a platform to showcase the vitality of photography.

The Press Release states that IPN'08, is part of the bi-lateral agreements between India and France, it began in the end of January, on the occasion of the State visit in India of the President of the French Republic Nicolas Sarkozy. This large-scale series of events will last till December 2008. The IPN'08 platform is based on a concept by independent photographer Alain Willaume (co-curator, Rencontres d'Arles 2007) and stems from the success of the Indian programme of Rencontres internationales de la photographie d'Arles 2007 and the publication of the 'book India Now, New Visions in Photography, (Textuel/Thames and Hudson, 2007), both supported by the Embassy of France in India. Seven exhibitions shown at IPN'08 has come from France.

Digital Diplomacy

Internet changes the dynamics of diplomacy

Untill recently an Ambassador's role was to uphold his majesty's honour at a foreign court, aided by no more than his wit, courage and eloquence, the "technologies" available at the time were nothing more than quill, pens and paper. However, things are different now. This is a period of Digital Diplomacy, Digital diplomacy in simple words is to use computer for the collection and analysis of the information needed to inform and carry out the new diplomatic objectives by the diplomats. In other word Digital Diplomacy is diplomacy conducted in the virtual world.

Internet an indispensable tool for Digital Diplomacy

Internet has become an indispensable working tool in Digital Diplomacy. This novel communication tool has had a revolutionary impact on Diplomacy. It has changed the way governments interact with each other in international sphere. Internationally, the dynamics of traditional diplomatic negotiations has been changed. The rapid transmission of knowledge directly from the source to the target allows the messenger to bypass all the diplomatic channels and requires much quicker, perhaps less considered response by government officials. External Affairs Ministry of all the countries have their websites and diplomats can now be contacted via e.mails which is much more convenient and quicker than sending a letter via post. Who would have thought 50 years back that diplomacy would be conducted at the click of a button.

Internet has made a tremendous impact on diplomacy as this tool allows anyone to express and produce message rather than just being a passive receiver. Now a days, if the British Foreign and Commonwealth Office needs a resolution that has been passed by the UN Security Council, it does not have to ask the Permanent Mission of the United Kingdom to the United Nations to find the resolution and send it to London. The resolution can be found on the UN's web pages. Similarly most of the agreements signed between any two countries are easily available on the internet. Now let us analyse the benefits of this tool for diplomats.

Diplomats can conduct in depth analysis

A major aspect of diplomatic work is the need to be informed, at any time, not only about developments in your own country but also about international developments. Information is considered to be power, and information gathering is one of the major diplomatic functions. The Internet provides this function to diplomats quickly and at almost zero cost. Quick and easy access information through the Internet, provide diplomats with a unique opportunity to be up to date at any time. All this available information provides the diplomat with sufficient resources for better and more in depth analysis in a shorter time; he can be in a position to discuss any issue that may be raised. Therefore, the Internet can be characterized as a major information tool for diplomats.

A lot of time is saved

Diplomats can now accomplish a significant amount of diplomatic work including administrative and consular work in a very less time. Now a days most of the consular information is already available on the websites of various Embassies. Major consular work such as granting of Visas is also being outsourced, most of the Embassies have on their websites, Visa forms, which can be downloaded. As internet has becomes useful and indispensable tool for fulfilling consular and administrative tasks, diplomats save a lot of time from diplomatic work of minor importance in order to have time for more high level diplomatic tasks.

An excellent propaganda tool

Digital diplomacy helps governments to not only advertise their position on various issues, but also ▶ promote or propagate their ideas worldwide. Such a function if used in a correct way helps the Embassy and as a result, the country that it represents, to create a positive image in the country.

Cybercampaigns can be used to influence political and economic decisions throughout the world. Diplomats now have an excellent propaganda opportunity which they can use irrespective of their geographic location at almost no cost. Who would not like to take an advantage of such a medium!

An economic tool

Digital diplomacy reduces the cost of operation of an Embassy as it improves efficiency and reduces the cost of internal support operations.

Collaboration and polarization is easier

Digital diplomacy allows the involvement of multiplied and diversified factors in international relations. It has created new forms of collaboration and alliance, but also it is a factor of polarisation, for people and organizations are more and more seeking their information and allies among those that share their views. So Internet makes collaborating and polarising easier and faster.

Need to filter information

For there is still the question of trust, that is, the Internet does not guarantee the communication of trustable information, in other words, it expands quantitatively the information available, but not qualitatively. Experts are of the view that today there has not been a serious development of mechanisms to transmit trusted information on the Net. This is extremely relevant for diplomacy and international relations in general, where information changes fast, is scarce and comes from many sources. There is still a great need of filtering and analysis of information done mainly by diplomats. In brief, the development of Digital Diplomacy means that "diplomats need to become masters of the Internet". Diplomats have traditionally been suspicious of new technologies.

Need to train diplomats

The revolution in information and communications technology has led to changes in both diplomatic practice and diplomatic training. For example, virtual teams of diplomats increasingly meet electronically to discuss and amend draft texts. Pre-negotiations are carried out more and more online. Most of the traffic between ministry and post is direct from desk to Embassy desktop. The same is true of communication between ministries and to an increasing extent between governments, with obvious implications for traditional hierarchies. The skills involved in performing these arts are going to have to be taught to enable diplomats to be as effective in cyberspace as in person, to ensure a common ministry standard, and to safeguard the vital bureaucratic processes of filing, retrieval, and archiving.

Dealing with the rapid inflow of information

Speed is an important characteristic of Digital diplomacy. In the information age, diplomats have to deal with a rapid inflow of information. It also requires rapid analysis of, rapid reactions and rapid operations in real time. Diplomats will have to make use of tremendous intellectual energy to keep up with the increase inflow of information.

Thus Digital Diplomacy is an excellent platform for communication and mutual interaction for diplomats as well as for their interaction with the officials of other countries. If sensibly used this new method of conducting diplomacy called Digital Diplomacy would clear all the ambiguity and would help in resolving many of the present conflicts.

Richard Stagg speaks about biofuels

BRITISH High Commissioner to India. Sir Richard Stagg gave a special address at the inaugural function of a biofuel project in New Delhi on 7 February, 2008. This project was inaugurated by Raghuvansh Prasad Singh, Union Minister for Rural Development, Government of India.

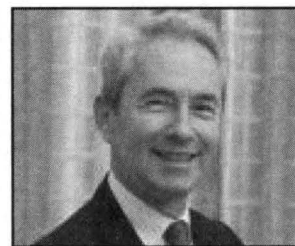

A press release issued by the British High Commission informs that the project funded by the UK Government's Global Opportunities Fund (GOF) is changing the lives of rural villagers in India. Winrock International India (WII) has implemented a unique village electrification project in the remote tribal village of Ranidehra, district Kawardha in the state of Chhattisgarh by setting up a stand-alone power plant which runs on straight vegetable oil extracted from seeds of Jatropha curcas plants.

On this occasion the British High Commissioner, Richard Stagg said, "The UK firmly believes that bio-fuels can make an important contribution to the reduction of greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions. This village electrification project based on Jatropha oil has brought visible change to the lives of the villagers and raised their overall quality of living."

This unique project assumes great significance against a background of addressing energy security in a country like India. We hope this project inspires other villages to emulate its success and thus contributes to providing electricity to those living in rural India without adding to Greenhouse Gases.

Richard Stagg

"Our Global Opportunities Fund is actively engaged in supporting projects on climate change, renewable energy, energy efficiency and energy security in India and we are committed to take this forward." Said the British High Commissioner.

Sri Lankan Navy urges cooperation with India

SRI Lankan Navy has expressed a desire to co-operate with India. Reports inform that, Sri Lanka Navy Chief Vice Admiral Wasantha Karannagoda has called for enhanced cooperation among the other naval units of the region. He also appreciated the greater vigilance and effective measures taken by India to curtail LTTE activities in Indian waters.

Media reports inform that while appreciating the great vigilance and effective measures taken by the Government of India to curtail LTTE activities in Indian waters, "The LTTE is a huge threat to the island nation and if it is not stopped now, it can be a threat to other countries as well," the Navy Chief said on February 14 to reporters on the sidelines of the Indian Naval Symposium (IONS).

He also said that such a joint mechanism is essential to curb LTTE activities in the Indian Ocean. "Co-operation with India has been extremely successful in countering the LTTE," he pointed out, adding that Sri Lanka is monitoring its seas to check activities like terrorism, smuggling, piracy, and human trafficking, while India carries out similar exercises in their waters.

Indian's fishing in troubled waters says Deputy High Commissioner P M Amza

DEPUTY High Commissioner of Sri Lanka in Chennai P M Amza, has stated that 161 Tamil Nadu fishermen have poached into the High Security Zone of Sri Lanka during the past one and half years. "The Indian fishermen are poaching in High Security Area, which is even banned for the Sri Lankan fishermen," the Deputy High Commissioner added.

Also Sri Lanka Navy (SLN), in a media statement issued on February 11, 2008 denied the allegations made by certain sections of the media of involvement in the killing of an Indian fisherman on February 9, 2008.

Sri Lanka Navy's media statement read, "Sri Lanka Navy exercises utmost care not to cross the International Maritime Boundary Line between Sri Lankan and Indian territorial waters while conducting patrolling and maritime surveillance to prevent LTTE arms smuggling and infiltration across the Gulf of Mannar and the Polk Bay."

The statement also drew attention to the recent incident where the Sri Lankan Navy did not open retaliatory fire when the persons yet to be identified on board two Indian fishing trawlers fired on one of SLN fibre glass boats in the seas off Talaimannar on the February 4, 2008. Then SLN boats did not retaliate in order to avoid other Indian fishing boats being hit in the cross fire.

"This was only one occasion of many where Sri Lanka Navy exercised utmost restraint not to fall prey to the LTTE's ploy of using Indian fishing boats in creating a rift between the two countries," the SLN statement said.

60th Anniversary of Sri Lanka's Independence Celebrated at the Deputy High Commission in Chennai

THE 60th anniversary of Sri Lanka's Independence was celebrated in Chennai on February 4, 2007.

On this occasion the Deputy High Commissioner hoisted the Sri Lankan national flag. After unfurling the flag, the Deputy High Commissioner P M Amza said, "It is also appropriate at this momentous moment to remember and record our appreciation and gratitude to the contributions and sacrifices made by our forefathers and many of our leaders during the pre-Independence era, who have made possible what we enjoy today."

The Deputy High Commissioner further said that Sri Lanka President Mahinda Rajapaksa was confident that the recently unveiled interim proposals by the All Party Parliamentary Committee would be the first step in the right direction in heralding permanent peace to the Island home. Mr Amza added. "I am also pleased to record our gratitude to the Government of India, which was among the first to welcome the interim proposals."

Mr Amza pointed out. It was our duty to ensure that the country (Sri Lanka) marched forward

HAL, BEML, BEL, Ordnance factories and upcoming defence private players like TATA Sons, Larsen and Tubro, Mahindra, Ashok Leyland and others were also present at the Expo.

On show at the fair were Air Defence systems, missile components, helicopters, infantry equipment, Naval attack systems and bigger weapons like armoured vehicles and tanks.

US enthusiasm

The US, has recently bagged first major military contract for sale of C-130J aircraft. This country, as per some media reports showed the maximum enthusiasm with 47 firms showcasing their arms and equipment, outshining India's traditional weapons supplier Russia.

American companies at the show range from aviation majors Lockheed Martin, Boeing, radar company Raytheon to naval firms like General Dynamics and Northrop Grumman.

Showcasing their weapon systems at the Defence Expo, top executives of two US companies said the military ties between the two countries were set to grow and the fate of civil nuclear deal will have no impact on this.

For the first time, telecom and IT companies were invited to the biennial event to showcase their product and services. There were 24 exhibitors from France.

Russian showcase

At present, Russia is India's main weapons supplier followed by Israel which last year registered weapons sales to New Delhi worth over $5 billion. A Brahmos missile was on display at the inaugural ceremony of the international DefExpo 2008. The Brahmos missile is a product of an Indo-Russian joint venture known by the same. Russia's ambassador to India said Tuesday that the Defexpo 2008 exhibition is a good opportunity for Russia to broaden its military and technical cooperation with India and Asia Pacific countries.

Russia was one of the largest exhibitor in this Exhibition. "Russia is showcasing its latest achievements in the arms industry and military-technical sciences. We are hoping to interest the Indian Armed Forces and the authorities generally," Russian Ambassador Vyacheslav Trubnikov said on this occasion.

Russia's state-run arms exporter Rosoboronexport is showcasing advanced Kalashnikov AK-101, AK-102 (5.56 mm), AK-103 and AK-104 (7.62 mm) assault rifles, the AN-94 Abakan machine-gun, the Bizon-20-1 (9 mm) pistol, the OSV-96 sniper rifle, and night vision devices.

"The current arms exhibition in many ways influences sales prospects for Russian military equipment in the Asia Pacific region," Trubnikov said.

Nikolai Dimidyuk, who heads Rosoboronexport's delegation, said that over 200 military specialists from various regions had visited the Russian stands. ►►

Significance of the Expo

Reports inform that India is planning to spend more than Rs 1, 20,000 crore on arms and equipment in the next five years. That's why arms manufacturers from all over the world were out in full force to woo the Indian defence establishment.

New Delhi is in the midst of finalising a 40,000 crore fighter jet deal. Boeing, Lockheed Martin and the European firm, EADS are amongst the six bidders. For them, this show provided an opportunity to get familiar with the ways of the Indian defence establishment in an informal setting.

Reports inform that on this occasion, CEO-Military Air System, EADS informed that India is a big market for both land and naval system and EADS is very keen to get a major share.

India wants best equipments

Government of India has recently cancelled a deal for 197 eurocopters, fresh offers will be invited for the deal."All companies, big, small, will be treated on merit, we want the best equipment at reasonable price," said A K Antony, Defence Minister.

UK's display

British Aerospace systems put the world's lightest 155MM Howitzer on display at the upcoming Defence Expo. Weighing less than 4218 kg, the M777 light weight 155MM Howitzers are now in service with the US Marine Corps and the US army as their next generation medium force weapon. The M777 is a .39 calibre gun and the Army is seeking to buy such lightweight towed artillery systems to replace its ageing 105mm mountain guns. "The guns are made with innovative use of titanium and aluminium alloy and can be deployed rapidly," BAE officials said.

The Army has floated new global tenders to acquire much-needed 325 artillery guns comprising upgraded 155MM heavy and ultralight Howitzers in a deal that could run upto Rs5,500 crore.

Presence of Communication and IT companies

The show for the first time has also attracted communication and IT companies.

Reports inform that The Defexpo India exhibition was conceptualized in 1998 to promote defense exports from India and exhibit the capabilities of Indian defence R&D and production. The exhibition, which began in 1999 with 197 exhibitors, has now grown into one of the most recognized international defense exhibitions in the world.

International seminars, especially the India Defense Industry Summit, held as part of the exhibition have evolved into the biannual International Defense Industry Forum.

THE US Secretary of Defence, Dr. Robert Gates arrived in New Delhi on February, 26 2008 on a two day visit to India. This was Dr. Gates first visit to India since assuming office on 18th December, 2006. Secretary Gates' visit took place in the last of the eight year of Bush Presidency that witnessed unprecedented acceleration in India-US engagement and qualitative transformation in the relationship, in particular in Defence.

The Defence Secretary led a 50 member defence cum business delegation to India. The main aim of US Defence Secretary's visit to India was to pursue closer strategic ties with India.

During his stay, Secretary Gates met Prime Minister Manmohan Singh External Affairs Minister Mr. Pranab Mukherjee, the Defence Minister Mr. AK Antony, the National Security Advisor MK Narayanan and other Indian leaders.

US Defence Secretary appeared to be extremely positive towards the Indo-US Nuclear deal "I think the civil nuclear initiative is a very good deal for both countries both India and the United States. I am here to see how we can expand the military to military relationship independent of the Civil Nuclear Agreement," Gates told reporters.

Robert Gates arrived in India, the same day on which India conducted its first test of a submarine-based ballistic missile named the K-15, which has a top range of 700 kilometres (438 miles). The missile was reportedly launched from an undersea platform.

When asked to comment on India's undersea missile launch Gates said, "We have to deal with the world as we find it. India is the world's largest democracy. It is in our interest to develop this relationship, just as it is in India's interest. I do not think there is any risk, particularly from our standpoint in doing that. I think we have a lot of opportunities for interaction with the Indians," He further added.

Serbia recalls its Ambassador to US

SERBIA recalled its ambassador to the US in the month of February, after Washington officially recognized the former Serbian province of Kosovo as an independent state.

Serbia is also threatening to recall its envoys from other countries that establish diplomatic ties with Kosovo, but it says relations with those countries will not be completely cut off.

As we all know, Kosovo province was part of Serbia, but one administered by the United Nations and NATO since 1999. NATO air strikes helped end the presence of Serbia's military in Kosovo. Former Yugoslav leader Slobodan Milosevic, now deceased, had been cracking down on militant ethnic Albanian separatists.

About 10,000 died in the conflict.

A UN envoy recommended in April 2007 that Kosovo be granted internationally supervised independence. Serbia was willing to offer autonomy, but Kosovo wanted full statehood.

"The (UN) plan is our blueprint forward," US President Bush said. "We'll watch to see how the events unfold today."

Kosovo sent out 192 letters to the world's nations, seeking formal recognition for its nationhood.

The European Union also met to discuss the issue. Some members like Spain, which has been battling a violent Basque separatist movement say they won't endorse Kosovo's move. However, Britain, Germany and France have followed the U.S. lead in recognizing Kosovo.

"Most of the Western countries will end up recognizing Kosovo, but the issue is the people on the ground," retired Lt.-Gen. Michel Maisonneuve, who served in Kosovo, informed the media.

Serbs have had a presence in Kosovo for more than 1,000 years and see it as the cradle of their Orthodox Christian church. The Albanian majority are mostly moderate Muslims.

Serbia said that it would work to block Kosovo from UN membership and other forms of diplomatic recognition.

"The so-called Kosovo state will never be a member of the United Nations," Serbian Foreign Minister

Vuk Jeremic said.

At present, Russia, a close ally of Serbia, is also lobbying against recognition of Kosovo's declaration. It sees the move as setting a dangerous precedence for separatist regions worldwide. Parts of Russia and Georgia are agitating for independence.

On Monday, Russia's Interfax news agency reported that Russia wants UN secretary general Ban Ki-moon to follow an earlier UN Security Council resolution that recognizes Kosovo as part of Serbia.

Mahdi Nabizadeh inaugurates First Indian Ocean Rim Nations Film Festival

IRANIAN Ambassador to India, Mahdi Nabizadeh inaugurated the First Indian Ocean Rim nations film festival in New Delhi. In his inaugural address to the IOR film festival

India reiterates, Arunachal an integral part of India

INDIAN Prime Minister Manmohan Singh visited Arunachal Pradesh on January 31. This was the first visit of a Prime Minister to the state in a decade. Manmohan Singh received an extremely warm welcome in Arunachal Pradesh. During this visit the Indian prime Minister made a statement, "Arunachal Pradesh is the easternmost state of our country, and the sun kisses the country here first, it is our land of the rising sun." He also announced development projects worth 10,000 crores for the state wewers.

This statement probably did not go down very well with our neighbour and it turned into a diplomatic row. The Chinese side immediately protested against Prime Minister Manmohan Singh's reference to Arunachal Pradesh as "our land of rising sun.

This elicited an immediate response from India which reiterated that Arunachal remains a part

and worked alongside other volunteers. The Consul General was as impressed with the camp at this year's inauguration as he was when he first observed its operations in January 2005.

"The dedication and spirit of the volunteers is amazing. I have personally witnessed the tremendous impact that the camp and its skilled doctors and personnel have on the lives of the patients. I have seen lives dramatically improved by the medical attention received at this camp. It is living proof of the transformative effect of volunteerism," Owen said.

Pak Ambassador to Afghanistan goes missing

ON February 12, media reports informed that Pakistan's ambassador to Afghanistan Tariq Azizuddin has gone missing just before he was due to cross into Afghanistan from Pakistan. There were speculations that Azizuddin was kidnapped in the Khyber tribal agency close to the Afghan border. Media reports inform that many areas in the border regions between Afghanistan and Pakistan are strongholds of pro-Taliban militants. Azizuddin was going to Kabul from Peshawar by road when he disappeared.

This route is supposed to be the shortest and quickest way between Peshawar, the Pakistani border city in North West Frontier Province (NWFP) and Kabul. Being the main trade route, the Khyber agency road is busy in daylight hours, and is a major route supplying reinforcements and supplies to the US and NATO forces in Afghanistan. Media reports inform that the Public Administration had no clue or prior information about the visit.

Ambassador speaks

David Mulford, Ambassador of US to India

"First of all, the United States would like to see India continue to grow and emerge as a major player in Asia. Secondly, we would like to see India pursue cleaner energy policies and a key part of that is civilian nuclear development. Finally, we think it is very, very important that the global architecture for non-proliferation should include India, which has been outside that system for 35 years. In other words the President believes it was not sensible to leave one-sixth of humanity outside of the system for the indefinite future."

US Embassy in Belgrade set on fire

US EMBASSY in Belgrade was set ablaze on February 20, 2008. This incident happened when around 150,000 people took to the streets to show opposition to Kosovo's declaration of independence. A charred body was reportedly found inside a section of the Embassy that was set on fire. By next day, the fire was extinguished and Belgrade's streets were relatively calm but the looting continued as per the media reports.

Some masked attackers who entered the Embassy broke away from the main demonstration in Serbia's Capital and reportedly attacked the Americans in response to United State's recent recognition of Kosovo's independence. Reports inform that usually the American Embassy in the Serbian Capital is guarded by around eight Serbian guards carrying assault rifles. However on the day of the attack the Embassy was closed.

Reportedly, the Croatian Embassy was also damaged but the Canadian Embassy remained unharmed. Some people have criticized the Serbian police to allow such a damage to occur.

At the time of the attack, the US Ambassador to Serbia was in his house and in contact with US officials. Serbia has "a responsibility now to devote the adequate resources to ensure that that facility is protected," he said.
